2016 Ended with Joyful Celebration and Continuation of the Monarchy

The annual Cup o Cheer in December had a great turnout. Fran and Dale Reid's home was decorated exquisitely, as usual. Despite it being a trying time for their family, they graciously hosted the Manor Club's holiday party. The food everyone brought was delicious and plentiful and the bar was overflowing with hot butter rum, egg nog, baileys, wine and tamer libations.

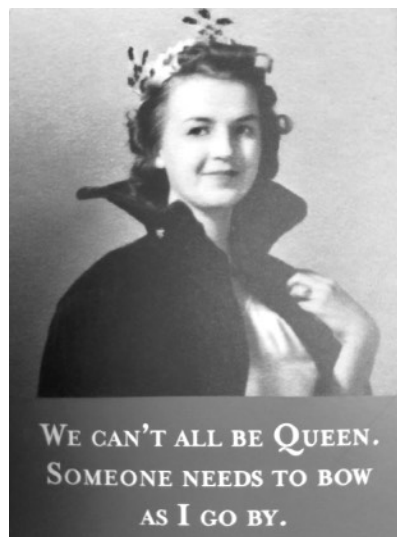

Newcomers to the manor, Judy and her son Joe were a delight to meet. Joe made himself invaluable by volunteering to be bartender. Many white elephant gifts were brought and caused quite an uproar as lots of nice items upped the ante on stealing and hilarity.

The annual meeting to re-elect officers was quickly held so as not to waylay the spirit of celebration. Despite dozens of volunteers begging to be elected president, the vote taken was to maintain the monarchy as it stood last year. This decision was, in no small, part due to gossip overheard before the vote:

- "Having royalty here makes our property values higher." and
- "The Marquise of Treasurer is a true treasure, we should bury him so he can't get away." and

- "The Royal Scribe travels to Asia. If we keep her conscripted, maybe she'll bring us some Hello Kitty stuff!" and
- "The Earl of Architecture is so busy with his successful carpet cleaning business he hasn't outlawed any of our architecture!" and
- "The green energy example set by the Earl of Vice Presidency as he peddles to work, is inspiring our community." and
- "the Queen has a big head but at least she hasn't chopped anyone else's off."

This gossip kicked up such excitement that the usurpers were overthrown and we maintained the throne.

Where oh where were the polar bear?

All conditions were perfect for them. Two inches of fresh fallen snow, a bracing 33 degrees air temperature and lake water a tepid 41 degrees. Food was plentiful thanks to Julia Patterson who picked out pumpkin pie and muffins, Aussie bites and cinnamon rolls and whipped cream. Someone brought a plate of heavenly chocolate goo bites and a huge platter of hot Mexican food was donated by Azteca. The incomparable Vennettis added cocoa and coffee and cider and kept the smorgasbord flowing onto many tables generously lent by the Lenzes in absentia. There were even a ridiculous amount and spirits to spice up the drinks, thanks to Bruce and Sandy Goulet. What more could a bear want?

The Pope even showed up, as did a huge snowman and the Polar Bear Queen (PBQ). But unfortunately, many fair weather polar bear of Angle Lake were in hibernation. Fifty people, half the number of last year, came out to feast and support 6 brave plungers. One, of whom put on the best show of all time. Brian Nelson took a running plunge, swam swiftly to the dock where three EMT Rescue crew were stationed. They watched surprised, as Brian threw himself on the dock and rolled over and over in the fresh snow. They were about to capture him for a 'mental evacuation' when he jumped to his feet and launched himself in a 360 degree sideways, cannonball flip into the water. The small crowd screamed and laughed at the spectacle, more than making up for their small number in volume.

The Pope, Fuzz Hill, stood knee deep in the frigid water giving a high five blessing to each bear who returned to shore. They all did return; in case you were wondering. Just as in all previous years, the EMT had nothing to do but applaud.

As bears changed into warm clothes by the roaring fire, built and tended masterfully by Tony Duncan, the PBQ passed out certificates and bendy polar bear prizes. She has a lot left over, so next year let's quadruple the number polar bears plunging.

Thanks to the efforts of Bob Simmons, Sally Andrews and the 'bearly' recognizable, black haired, mop headed, Julie Hill, 100 pounds of food and $245 was collected to replenish the Highline food bank depleted from holiday demand. Of course that is whole 'reason for freezin' so we are proud of the generosity of our small crowd. They donated about half of what we pulled in last year in food but exceeded the dollar donations by about $25!

We rewarded their generosity with the raffle for fabulous prizes. No one was disappointed that more people had not shown up at this point, as there were lots of prizes and few raffle tickets increasing the chances of a win. It worked so well that two people won multiple prizes.

This caused consternation among those whose tickets were not called, so we are considering a new plan for next year. People can still have multiple chances to win by bringing lots of food or cash donations, but they can only keep one prize. They get to choose which of the prizes they want to keep and the rest will go back in the hat for another draw. What do you think, good idea, or not?

Thanks to Jonathan Standridge, who acted as photographer and organizer, there are great photos of the action posted on the ALSC blog or just follow this link: <http://bit.ly/2ih7grl>

The very last photo is actually a video of the hilarious snowman wiggling her carrot nose. She kept mum about her identity, but rumor has it, that Sherry Yapp was the mastermind behind (and inside) the prize winning costume.

Probably because her paws were frozen, The PBQ forgot to award the prize for Best Costume at the event but after she thawed, she delivered to the snowman the prize of a gift certificate from Project Solutions worth $165 of contractor help.

It pays to play dress up and show up!

It's never too early to plan your costume for next year's plunge. See you then!

Here is the list of the fabulous prizes and the wonderful local businesses who generously donated them.
